

DICKSON MBI

Dickson started dancing in 2005, his main styles being popping and boogaloo. He has won several competitions in the UK and Europe, and participated in many commercial works. After meeting contemporary dance teacher Stuart Thomas in 2008, he sought further training and undertook a foundation and access course in dance at Lewisham College before going on to train at London Contemporary Dance School.

He was studying at the school when Russell Maliphant saw Dickson dancing at Sadler's Wells in Breakin' Convention 2011 and asked Dickson to join him for The Rodin Project.

Dickson has also appeared in television commercials for Lucozade and Audi, both of which were choreographed by Russell Maliphant.
